Cantor Colburn Partner Daniel Gibson Recognized as a New Leader in the Law

Daniel R. Gibson, Partner
Cantor Colburn LLP

Hartford, Conn.—Cantor Colburn congratulates partner Daniel R. Gibson for being recognized with the New Leader in the Law award for 2014 by the Connecticut Law Tribune. Out of a pool of 300 “incredibly well-qualified and diverse” applicants, Gibson is among the 60 distinguished attorneys who were selected to receive this award, each of them under the age of 40.

Gibson and his fellow New Leaders will be honored at an awards dinner on November 6th at the Bond Ballroom in downtown Hartford. The honorees will be in the Tribune’s New Leaders in the Law 2014 Yearbook, published in a special edition last week.

Gibson co-chairs the Design Patent Practice Group. Gibson’s clients include Fortune 100 companies, for whom Gibson provides clearance and invalidity opinions, agreement support, and global management of patent and design filings.

“As a young attorney, Dan’s already developed the most important skill that an intellectual property lawyer needs: the ability to come up with practical, cost effective solutions to client problems,” said Michael Cantor, Co-Managing Partner of Cantor Colburn. “Dan handles complex issues and reliably has astute and practical ways to solve problems for issues in such a way that preserves the client’s IP rights, adds value to their portfolio, and is cost effective.”

A graduate of Quinnipiac University School of Law and Wesleyan University, where he earned a degree in neuroscience, Gibson has been practicing patent law for 10 years. He is admitted to the state bar of Connecticut and the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.
